About NBPA

For over 40 years, the National Black Prosecutors Association has been the only professional membership organization dedicated to the advancement of blacks as prosecutors.

Founded in 1983, the Association's membership is comprised of prosecutors in the continental United States, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico and Canada. It includes both chief and line prosecutors from local, state and federal offices. In addition to prosecutors, the association's membership includes law students, former prosecutors, and law enforcement personnel.

In 2019, our national reach expanded with partnerships that allowed us to travel to various countries in Africa to train attorneys how to investigate and prosecute an array of offenses.

NBPA has established a number of training programs in direct response to the needs of its membership. The annual convention serves as a comprehensive and intensive training session on innovative changes in the law, its application and consequences.

The mission of the NBPA is reflected in the organization's commitment to the recruitment of blacks within the prosecutorial arm of the legal profession. It is to ensure not only retention of blacks in prosecution, but also to correct the dramatic inequity that exists with respect to black representation in executive ranks of prosecutors' offices. A further goal is to recruit, train and mentor aspiring lawyers for leadership roles in the years ahead.

In 2016, the NBPA expanded its mission by creating a 501(c)(3) foundation to support the next generation of law students of color that are passionate about pursuing a career in prosecution.

Since 2016, the National Black Prosecutors Foundation (NBPF) has provided 33 scholarships and fellowships to students who demonstrate an interest in prosecution. In 2021, the NBPF launched a fellowship program, providing funding and mentorship to students who will be interning at state prosecutors' offices. The NBPF seeks to strengthen the pipeline of minority law students entering a career in prosecution through its Fellowship Program, which will provide placement and financial assistance to law students interested in participating in an unpaid internship at a prosecutor's office.

NBPA serves as the Nation's resource center for research, training, knowledge-building, and accountability as it works to promote the fair and equitable administration of justice.
